

CAMPAIGN FOR POOL IN LINCOLN NEXT.

EFFORT WILL BE MADE TO ORGANIZE TOBACCO GROWERS. CROP PROSPECTS.

With good progress being made in the campaign to pool the 1910 tobacco crop in the counties south of the Kentucky river, the next to be invaded by the Burley Tobacco Society will be Lincoln. Arrangements are already being made for speaking dates in this county for the organizers of the Society and a hard fight will be made to pool much of the big crop which is going to be raised by Lincoln county farmers this season.

The argument that is going to be presented to the Lincoln growers for their consideration in the question of pool or no pool, is that unless the pool is a success, the price of tobacco will go back to where it was before the first successful pool made it worth while to grow the weed in this section. A hard fight is being made on the pool in some sections, but its friends are working all the harder and say that the success of the pooling of this year's crop is already assured.

Bradley Wilson, organizer for the Burley Tobacco Society, south of the river, has been meeting with splendid success in his efforts to organize the Lincoln county tobacco growers. He spoke to a large crowd in the court house at Lancaster Monday and Col. Joel Fort, who played such an important part in organizing the dark tobacco growers of Tennessee, also spoke with Mr. Wilson. The latter has about completed work of organizing the pool in Lincoln and will then come to Lincoln county and make a strong effort to convince the tobacco growers their interests are inseparably bound up in the success of the pooling movement.

In this connection some very interesting figures have been compiled by the Cincinnati Enquirer regarding the production of tobacco this year. The Enquirer says: This year's crop of tobacco in the United States will not be far from 70,000,000 pounds greater than the crop of 1909 and that broke all previous records. The nearest approach to last year's crop in size was that of 1899, when according to the figures of the Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Commerce and Labor there were planted in the United States 1,101,460 acres, from which the production was 568,112,365 pounds valued at $66,957,902. According to the same authority last year's acreage was 1,180,200 and the production 549,557,000 pounds, valued at $55,712,365.

This area is, perhaps, too large by 50,000 acres, as that of Kentucky is reported at 420,000, where it could not at the most have exceeded 370,000. The returns this spring of the acreage planted last year, as reported to the Enquirer for this review, show an average of 365,440, about one third of all the tobacco raised. This still will leave the area planted in 1909 stand as the record to that time, 1,132,255 acres and make the production about 540,958,400.

The crop of 1910 has been planted practically everywhere or will be in a few days. The indications are that 1,101,100 cultivated acres of tobacco in the area planted is about 1,319,877 acres, from which not less than 1,000,000 (probably more) pounds of leaf tobacco should be harvested. Another year of extension of this industry and the tobacco production of this country should be well established beyond the 1,000,000,000 pound mark.

The tobacco area of the three Ohio valley states, Kentucky, Ohio and Indiana is the greatest tobacco producing field in the United States, or in the world. The combined acreage is 495,425 and is almost one-half that of the total tobacco producing acreage of the United States. It is the greatest burley field in the world and outside of burley territory produces other types of such excellent quality that they are sought for by the manufacturers of the highest grades of smoking and chewing brands in all parts of the world.

The area planted in Kentucky this year is 30,000 acres greater than in 1909. Planting conditions were very mixed. Some reports were very discouraging, while others say the plants were never set out under such favorable conditions; that they were strong and have grown well after the plants were set. About half the acreage is white burley the other types being River, French, Italian, Turkish Yellow Prior, Regia types, Blue Prior, Orinoco and almost countless other varieties, even standard types yielding almost new varieties when introduced into new districts.

Up The Cumberland.

BOAT TRIP BEAUTIFULLY DESCRIBED BY MR. CARSON

Burnside, June 23.

Editor Interior Journal:

Burnside is a fine little city, nestled among the mountains of southern Kentucky, situated on the Cumberland river.

Last Saturday the Woman's Home Mission Society of the Methodist church of this place gave an excursion down the Cumberland on the good steamer Rowena, which is owned by the Burnside and Burkville Transportation Co. Our crowd was rather large but there was plenty of room for all, even for the children to play. Many of the best people of our community and of Somerset were in this crowd; a special train was run by the C. N. O. & T. P. railroad for the Somerset people.

Our boat left the wharf at two P. M., reached the lock, No. 21, at 5:15; left there at 6 P. M., reaching Burnside at 10:15. The scenery along the Cumberland cannot be surpassed; nature is dressed in her most gorgeous robe at this time of the year and the hill sides and fields and meadows on our either side were a feast to any lover of the beautiful. There are some places along this river where the cliffs are very precipitous and the rocky ribs of these hills added to the attractiveness of the scene as they protruded among the foliage.

It is not very often possible to secure the opportunity for an excursion on the Cumberland, for the water is generally so low at this time of the year that our regular steam boats can not ply this high, but the late rains this year have given us steam boat water longer than usual, consequently we are enjoying nature's gifts. The best part of a trip of this character is the return by moonlight, to see the moonbeams playing upon the waters and the fields and cliffs; no one can describe such scenery, especially when we enter ever and anon into the shadow cast by some very high cliff and are given the beautiful sight of the searchlight's play upon all around.

From this meagre description you can get some idea of our afternoon and evening pleasure, but you can never appreciate such until you have experienced a like trip for yourself, which I trust that you, as Interior Journal readers, will be soon privileged to enjoy. JOHN W. CARSON.

Want To Play Us.

LANCASTER PAIR TEAM ISSUES CHALLENGE TO STANFORD

The Lancaster independent ball team is very anxious for a game with Stanford, and has issued a direct doll for a game with the local champions. An effort was made to get a double-header arranged to be played on the grounds there, next Monday, the 4th of July, but the Stanford team has disbanded for the season, the school term being ended, and it was found that it would be very hard to scrape up a nine here, and if one could be secured, it would probably have to play the game without practice.

The challenge received from Lancaster, reads as follows:

To the Stanford Base Ball Team—

We hereby challenge the Stanford base ball club for a game of base ball to be played either in Lancaster or neutral grounds on any open date the terms to be 75 per cent of the gate receipts to the winner and 25 per cent to the loser; or the winning team to receive the total receipts. We are willing to play one game or a series of games.

A. JOSEPH.

Manager Lancaster Independent Base Ball Team.

TAKE HEED TO THE THINGS OF THE SOUL.

Some one is in great need spiritually in Stanford. Is it you?

Perhaps you do not realize just how very great your soul's need is. Will you stop just a short time to consider this matter? You are either a child of God
